1.1 Read the extract below and then answer the questions.

TEXT A

[Tshidiso's neighbours gossip.]

The gossip included the naked Sunday chases as well as what went on inside our house, despite the fact that most people had never even been near our gate. They said, 'They brew things in there, things to use on men.'

'No woman should have that kind of rage.'

'The eldest one killed herself with her own poison.'

And this, which I only heard once, 'That child has no chance of a normal life, just like those girls (my aunts) never did.'

At first, I thought that other children did not like me, but when I grew older I realised that I lived in the kind of household mothers warn their children to keep away from. Once I was playing with a neighbour's little girl when suddenly her mother pulled her by the ear, yelling that there had been madness in my family for many generations, and no child of hers would go near me.

TEXT B

[Beth's parents arrive at the school.]

'Do you think Veronica's parents will come too?' I asked KB.

'Please!' her voice was flat. 'Her mother is a nurse and her father probably works in the kind of place where the boss has to give you permission to go outside for a smoke.' KB chewed on her last baby carrot.

'She brought it on herself,' she added, her focus shifted to a nearby game of rounders. Her words cut through me, and I winced. I wanted to say there was more to the story than that, but I decided against it. If anything happened with Beth's parents, if they were angry with the school or something, it was probably safer for me to be seen with KB, who was not in any way involved. Now I was glad that KB had not asked what I had heard. I did not want to talk about it any more.

TEXT E

[The boy is sent to look for the jackal.]

Suddenly his mind cleared. They were vermin, these cuddly red balls of movement. Tomorrow they would be big and lethal, killing the sheep that survived this terrible drought. He picked up a large stone, lifted it high above his head, and threw it away from him with all his might. He could not do it, he could not kill these beautiful creatures.

5

Shoulders sagging, he walked away. What would he do, his mother depended on him? He had to care for their flock; to make sure the lambs came to no harm. His mother loved this farm. Maybe he could tell old Taboets to come down and kill the cubs. But he knew he would not do that either. So he walked on, kicking the stones as he went.

What was more, there were quite a number of us sitting in Jurie Steyn's post office who had actually taken part in that non-stop affair, and without knowing that we were breaking records, and without expecting any sort of a prize for it, either.

We discussed that affair at considerable length and from all angles, and we were still talking about it when the lorry came. And we agreed that it had been in several respects an unusual occurrence. We also agreed that it was questionable whether we could have carried off things so successfully that day if it had not been for Billy Robertse.

You see, our organist at Bekkersdal was Billy Robertse. He had once been a sailor and had come to the bushveld some years before, travelling on foot. His belongings, fastened in a red handkerchief, were slung over his shoulder on a stick.

[Michiel assists Tant Sienie.]

There was so much for Tant Sienie to do: now an appointment with the attorney or the bank manager, then again a new difficulty over the building of the house. And Michiel couldn't see Ellie because she was busy working during the morning and he had to be back on the farm in the early afternoon. A thing that bored him to tears was that Tant Sienie always insisted on eating in the café. He could not surmise what was going on in the mind of the woman sitting opposite him; that Tant Sienie was thinking of all those days that she had had to sit on the Church Square in the cart eating thick slices of bread with butter and biltong in all weathers, whether the wind blew icy cold or whirled the dust like a red blanket against the cart or not, because Karl was too mean to spend a few shillings.

[Mynheer van Hunks and a stranger discuss smoking.]

'I'll smoke against you for the love of the thing.'

Then van Hunks took the bag by its two bottom corners, and shook its contents on to a large flat stone. People say that there were eight pounds, no less, of strong tobacco, damp with rum, as sailors like it. He divided the heap into two equal parts. 5

'Now,' said van Hunks, 'choose one heap and I'll take the other.'

'That's fair and generous,' quoth the stranger, as he laid his hands on his share; 'I've taken a liking to you, Mynheer van Hunks.'

'Most people love me at sight,' said the sailor, grimly.

'I'm popular myself,' returned the other. 10

[Walter drives his wife to the hairdresser.]

'Not so fast! You're driving too fast!' said Mrs Mitty. 'What are you driving so fast for?'

'Hmm?' said Walter Mitty. He looked at his wife, in the seat beside him, with shocked astonishment. She seemed grossly unfamiliar, like a strange woman who had yelled at him in a crowd. 'You were up to forty-five,' she said. 'You know I don't like to go more than forty. You were up to fifty-five.' Walter Mitty drove on toward Waterbury in silence, the roaring of the SN202 through the worst storm in twenty years of Navy flying fading in the remote, intimate airways of his mind. 'You're tensed up again,' said Mrs Mitty. 'It's one of your days. I wish you'd let Dr Renshaw look you over.'

SONG OF THE UNEMPLOYED – Andries Walter Oliphant

1 This room with its brooding coal stove
2 And aluminium pots, unnerves me.
3 The broom standing in the corner.
4 And the black coat hanging from the wall.
5 What's in the cupboard below the window?

6 I stand in the doorway or look from the window
7 And see a grey dustbin
8 At the hingeless gate.
9 An aloe with spear-shaped leaves
10 Catches my eye:
11 What does it want to say?

12 Later today, I will take a plastic bucket
13 And fetch water
14 From a tap down the street.
15 I will step around puddles.
16 And avoid hungry-long dogs.
17 Where do all the emaciated animals come from?

18 At dusk, when the first trains pull up,
19 I will stoke the fire,
20 Cook a huge pot of porridge,
21 Some vegetables
22 And a small portion of meat. Then
23 I will wait for my wife and children to return from work.

PASTORAL – William Carlos Williams

1 The little sparrows

5 with sharp voices
6 over those things
7 that interest them.
8 But we who are wiser
9 shut ourselves in
10 on either hand
11 and no one knows
12 whether we think good
13 or evil.

14 Meanwhile,
15 the old man who goes about
16 gathering dog-lime
17 walks in the gutter
18 without looking up
19 and his tread
